

Job Printing

In all its numerous and diverse branches done as it should be at THE OPTIC Job Rooms.

THE LAS VEGAS DAILY OPTIC.

No Wise Merchant

Would do without ADVERTISING, and the wisest use THE OPTIC.

VOL. XIX.

EAST LAS VEGAS, NEW MEXICO, MONDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 21, 1898.

NOT THE MAGAZINE

It is Intact—Explosion Must Be From External Cause.

RECOVERING DEAD SAILORS

Thirteen More Divers to go to Havana—100 Dead Still in the Deep.

SPANISH CAPTAIN "O. K."

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A dispatch to the New York Herald from Key West, says: "Incredible as it may seem, it is said that after partial examination of the magazines of the 'Maine,' divers report that the one in which the explosion is supposed to have occurred is intact."

According to the Herald's correspondent's informant, the contents of this magazine are unharmed.

This report reaching Key West, it is said, caused the court of inquiry, commission to decide to proceed to Havana at once and begin the investigation instead of organizing the court here. The light-house tender "Mangrove," with the members of the court of inquiry aboard, left for Havana yesterday evening.

IT WAS NOT THE MAGAZINE.

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—Lieutenant Commander Barnett, of the Coast Survey boat "Bache" said to a correspondent of the Associated Press today: "There are ninety-five chances out of a hundred that the investigation will show that the forward magazine of the 'Maine' did not blow up first. If it exploded at all, it was not the cause of the terrible consequences that followed."

The naval court of inquiry arrived here this morning and will begin the investigation immediately.

RECOVERING BODIES CONTINUED.

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—Divers today are continuing in their search to recover victims of the disaster to the battleship "Maine." There is no record in the report that an explosion occurred at the wreck of the "Maine."

SHOWS SPANISH'S PRESENT SPIRIT.

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—At about midnight, while a masquerade ball was in progress at the Luján theater, a bomb was exploded on a second floor, wounding a lawyer named Pou, his father and two other persons.

GETTING DEAD BODIES OUT BEFORE INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—Several reports came by telegraph to the state and navy departments from Havana today. These messages throw no light upon the disaster and, in fact, the officers of the navy department have about resigned themselves to the belief that nothing definite or certain can be known for several days to come, as the operations of the divers upon the wreck are being continued to the recovery of the bodies of the dead and the recovery of valuables, neither of which can be neglected, while other branch work, namely the investigation of the cause of the disaster, may be more properly left to be conducted by the court of inquiry.

MORE DIVERS WANTED—100 DEAD BELOW.

General Lee's dispatch said: "There is a great need of divers to get the effects and bodies from the wreck. Two are now employed but twelve or fifteen could be used. One hundred and forty-three bodies have been buried. Over a hundred are supposed to be confined in the ship." Acting Secretary Day made the following answer: "I have called upon the navy department with your request, for divers. The request will be complied with." Contracts are now being drawn with wrecking companies. The navy department has not yet definitely determined which of the wreckage shall replace the "Maine" in the Havana harbor, although it has determined that another ship must be sent there.

SPANISH CAPTAIN IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Three boats having aboard police patrol and U. S. marines, acting as guard over the Spanish warship "Vizcaya," at anchor off Tompkinsville, have been withdrawn at the request of Captain Eulate, the commander of the "Vizcaya," who said he would trust his ship to American honor.

$200,000 APPROPRIATION FOR "MAINIE" PASSED.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The senate passed the house joint resolution, appropriating $200,000 for the recovery of the "Maine" wreck. It will now go to the president for his approval.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—Allen, of Nebraska, introduced the following resolution: "Resolved that the committee on naval affairs be instructed and is hereby directed to make a thorough inquiry into the destruction of the battleship 'Maine' in the Havana harbor on the 15th instant and report to the senate." The resolution passed without debate.

CONVENTIONS.

School Superintendents' Conference, Meet in the South.

CHATTANOOGA, Feb. 21.—The hotels are crowded with delegates to the annual convention of the National association of state and city school superintendents, which will be in session here throughout the week, and additional delegations are arriving on every train. Several thousand superintendents and minor instructors will take part in the proceedings. There is also here a small army of agents of the numerous school book publishing houses in the United States, who are using all their arts to secure influence and support of the various state delegations in behalf of their rival establishments.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED DAIRYMEN.

TOPEKA, Feb. 21.—Nearly fifteen hundred of the most prominent butter makers and creamery men in the country took part today in the opening session of the National Butter Makers' association. The chief dairymen states are well represented, and the Minneapolis delegation has brought, as an adjunct, a quartet from the state agricultural college. There is an elaborate exhibition of butter and dairy machinery for which prizes are offered.

Guests Hemmed in by the Flames.

PUNSCOTT, Ariz., Feb. 21.—A disastrous fire occurred here at about midnight, resulting in the total destruction of the Johnson House hotel owned by Miss Christine Johnson. The fire made such headway that thirty guests lost nearly everything and many had hair-breadth escapes. Dr. D. E. Kayser was seriously burned about the head, feet, and back. Doctors express only slight hopes of his recovery. Charles Perkins jumped from the second story and escaped without injury to his spine. H. J. Garrett, stenographer, jumped from the third story and was injured in the spine and otherwise bruised. Annie Peterson, chambermaid, discovered the fire and remained in the third story, awakening the guests until the flames closed every avenue of escape by ascending through a window to a mansard roof where she was rescued after being badly burned.

THE SOUTHWEST NEWS BOARD.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois are practically snow-bound. An average snow fall of two feet is reported from Illinois and Iowa, while throughout Wisconsin and Northern Michigan the fall was much heavier. This is by far the heaviest snow fall of the season.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 21.—A blizzard, which started Saturday, spent its fury shortly after midnight. The record at the weather bureau shows that there was a fall of twenty-two inches of snow in two days.

Supreme Court Decision.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—In the case of William Grice and others, under indictment in Texas for violating the anti-trust law of that state, the United States supreme court today held that the federal circuit court had interfered in granting a writ of habeas corpus when no proper exigency arose for such interference; therefore the decision was reversed demanding the prisoner's custody by state officials. The court will not enter upon the merits of the anti-trust law.

Frozen to Death.

MENOMINEE, Mich., Feb. 21.—The Menominee fishermen lost in the blizzard in Green Bay Sunday night, were found this morning, wrapped in sails in their fishing lights and nearly dead. Nine other fishermen are supposed to have perished.

McKinley Leaving Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—President McKinley left Washington today for Philadelphia, where he will deliver an address before the University of Pennsylvania tomorrow.

House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Under an arrangement made last week today in the house of representatives was given up to the consideration of private bills.

Yimmie Michael Retired.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 21.—The Post Dispatch today announced the retirement of Yimmie Michael, the greatest player ever known, and says he will enter the employ of Phil Dwyer as a jockey.

THREATENING IN EUROPE

War Between Eng'and and France as a Result of French Invasion in Africa

ARIZONA HOTEL IN FLAMES

The "Gilded Fool" Married Maxine Elliott—Mardi Gras in the South.

THE ENGLISH ROYALTY

France and England to War.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Great activity is manifested by the colonial office, War Office, and among high military officers going out to Lagos, Freetown, and other ports, which reached Niger coast yesterday. It is said that two French expeditions are advancing toward Sokoto, which is within the British sphere of influence. It is said that if this news should be confirmed it must be followed by a declaration of war between England and France.

Special to the Optic.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The present feeling between England and France has been of old birth and steadily growing for at least a year. The Greco-Turkish complications that drew so much of the attention of the European powers last summer may be thought for keeping the attention and mind of these two nations diverted from each other. Otherwise they may have undoubtedly been spiked on to the trouble by the many events in Africa. The chief trouble here was brought about by the Egyptians in connection with the Suez canal. The Egyptians were determined to control that water passage. They declared that the right of regulating the management of the canal, setting the amount of the toll, and granting permission to pass through belonged to them by right. England could not hear of this. The question was of weighty importance. It ended determined the question of the control of a great commercial as well as strategic key. England asked France to co-operate with them to defeat the Egyptians in their aim. France hesitated and procrastinated, but with an eye to the possibility of bringing himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the plea of infirmities incident to her advancing years, the Queen has opened Parliament and has also held her drawing rooms by proxy. In fact it was given out officially, on the occasion of the jubilee celebration last year, that it would probably be the last visit of Her Majesty to the metropolis. Her latest resolve is understood to be due to her disinclination to be regarded as a Queen emerita, as it were, or, in other words, no longer considered as a sovereign who is practically taking no interest in public affairs, and who is only waiting for the last call. It is noteworthy also, that the Queen's visit to Egypt is being so publicized, that it is being taken as an opportunity to bring himself into favorable public attention, his contribution to the Christian fund of a Republic new newspaper of this city was an act of the president of the English court while, at a recent meeting of the hospital fund association to which reporters were admitted, he made to less than three extemporaneous speeches which occupied over a column in the papers the following morning. These incidents are taken as an indication first that the Queen purposes to keep on demonstrating that she is very much alive, and second, that the Prince of Wales has been inspired with an ambition to make himself solid with the masses.

Queen's Visit to Egypt.

LONDON, England, Feb. 21.—The semi-official announcement that the Queen will personally hold a drawing room at Buckingham palace immediately upon her return from the Continent at the beginning of May, and that at this function Her Majesty will receive the diplomatic corps, has caused a flutter of excitement among the nobility and aristocracy, and is creating no end of comment in view of the fact that for some time past, on the